KINGDOM OF UTOPIA

A lyrical concept story written by Ian Parry with music composed by Niels Vejlyt

Long ago there existed a kingdom and in that kingdom lived the gentiles. A peace loving people whose skills covered a wonderful variety of gifted crafts from architects to painters and philosophers to mathematicians. Over 1. millennia their understanding of a balance between man and nature evolved. They created a language understood throughout their world and the essence of this unique form of communication was its principle, “purity of mind”. Their talents helped them create methods for enhancing the natural resources within the ground. They combining rich soils with stone and formed these elements into a hardened rock, which they shaped into different forms and sizes.

From this new source they built colossal structures and temples long before the Maya’s and their domain became a forbidden place to the outside world.

These 2. great believers saw a world of the future in perfect harmony. Their strength and power came from words and not the sword. Communication formed a unity of ideas, which side by side formed together as one. This ancient language had helped them to survive for thousands of years.

Alas for the first time this tranquil peaceful society would come under treat. Unbeknown to the gentiles 3. a warrior king called Maddogcladees began building his own empire. An empire for emperors belonging to his forefather’s tribe. A portrait from their tribal paintings of long ago, showed his forefathers had predicted the birth of a warrior king. Now finally his own Mandie Empire was complete and his destiny clear. He must lead his people into battle whatever the cost.

Believing in the consolation of the stars, the stars proclaimed the existence of a 4. wonderland. There they would find a city of angels. And so they set-off in search of this lost world into the great frontier. The gentiles not realising the existence of others, had built these magnificent 5. temples of doom. These temples would draw the strangers closer to them, finally placing their race under direct treat.

Maddogcladees so it was written was destined to become the ultimate ruler. A pharaoh in his kingdom the 6. kingdom of utopia. Anticipating a great battle full of glory the unexpected happened. The gentiles did not rise-up in anger, but instead greeted the warriors with open arms. They sent forward their most precious gift of all, their immaculate being. Their princess whose beauty was so stunning would steal the warrior's heart. Astonishingly Maddogcladees this fierce warrior king would fall in love with one so fair and kind. In his eyes she was the one; his 7. queen of hearts.

Believing her to be part of his destiny, he took this fair maiden as his bride to be. He decreed that there marriage was a bond uniting these two peoples. And so the princess became the mother of pearl watching over the Mandie tribe and the Gentiles throughout this great new world.

The warrior king stood by his queen's side and lay down his sword. For a while he kept it close by in case the good times turned to bad. This unity as he thought would not last and his soldiers became restless. Their king swore an oath that he would bring them gold and riches beyond belief. How could this place be their kingdom of utopia, whilst the riches their king had promised never appeared.

Only their king was happy with his new bride.

However fate would come to their rescue. Slowly the waters around this kingdom would begin to rise. The rains poured down bringing a great flood. Many were reluctant to leave, but the warrior king believed they must flee this precious land. The stars would lead them to safety pointing the way to a haven. Although it was hard to leave their past behind they built a massive boat. An impressive structure being only one of a kind they set-off travelling to a place they could not see on the other side of nowhere. Crossing what to them seemed like 8. oceans of time they battled on together through rough seas and stormy weather.

Finally warrior and gentiles alike would find their Utopia, a safe place on high ground with an abundance of fruit and fresh water. Multi-coloured birds filled the skies and tame animals wandered freely. The great floods resided and as it was predicted they had found their paradise. Finally this proud nation could rejoice in their new land. In honour of their gods and ancestors they built a monument on the highest mountain where they placed 9. a sacred fire and lit an eternal flame to protect and shine across this peaceful sacred land.
